

The new rail yard in Springville will play host to long strings of coal cars for the Intermountain Power Project near Lynndal

Springville Coal Facility Is Ready For IPP Shipments

By NORLEY HALL
Springville Correspondent

SPRINGVILLE — On June 17, the first train load of coal is slated to leave the new Intermountain Power Project railroad yard in western Springville. The coal will travel to Delta where a huge stockpile will be built up pending the use of it in the new IPP Power unit in Lynndyl, Utah.

The movement of the coal will mark the onset of the production phase of the mammoth power project. It will also be the production usage kick off for the Springville facility. "We have a two phase operation in Springville," notes project manager Dave Leopardi. "We take the coal cars left here by the D&RGW and the Utah Railroad system and make up a train to be delivered to Delta by the Union Pacific. The other function of the facility will be the inspection and repair of the coal hauling cars."

Leopardi notes that the reason for locating the yard this far north of the Lynndyl plant is because this is the common meeting point of the three railroad systems. "The Y is in the Provo railroad yards," he noted. "The Utah Railroad will haul coal from one mine and the D&RGW will bring the rest of it."

At present there is the first string of new coal cars sitting in the new yard. "These are replacement cars," Leopardi stated. "As the cars go through the yard we will gradually take the ones out of service that need routine repairs. The new cars will replace them."

The car repair functions of the new yard will not begin until the new repair facility building is completed sometime in 1986. The new building will be known as the Rail Car Service Center.

Except for the repair center building, the project is nearing completion. The rails are set, fencing, landscaping, a new open drain and a new road are all completed.

Higley Pleads Guilty to Burglary

Clark Anderson Higley, charged with the aggravated kidnapping of his ex-wife and the burglary of her residence earlier this month, pleaded guilty to the second-degree burglary in exchange, for the dismissing of the kidnapping charges. The agreement was announced during his arraignment in criminal court Friday. Higley is charged with taking his ex-wife to Wendover against her will.

He was referred to the Adult Probation and Parole Division for a pre-sentencing evaluation and will return to court May 31 for sentencing.

In other criminal court action Friday:

• John W. Gaston, 24, 671 E. 2200, Provo, charged with possessing controlled substance with the intent to distribute it for value, has given a trial date of July 17.

• Craig L. Mecham, 31, 483 E. 900, Pleasant Grove, pleaded guilty to two counts of forging checks.

The plea was part of a plea-bargaining agreement calling for other charges to be dismissed if he would plead guilty.

Judge Bullock agreed to reduce his bail from $20,000 on each count to $5,000, and scheduled his sentencing for June 14. He also referred him to the Adult Probation and Parole Division for a pre-sentencing evaluation.

• Fred D. Solomon, 19, 1469 Arthur Rd., Provo, pleaded not guilty to third-degree theft charges in connection with a March 18 incident. In exchange for his plea, three other counts will be dropped. Sentencing was scheduled for June 14 and he was referred to the Adult Probation and Parole Division for a pre-sentencing evaluation.

• Mark E. Quijano, 29, 655 1/2 N. 500, Provo, pleaded guilty to a May 3 third-degree felony theft. Judge Bullock scheduled June 14 for trial setting and referred Quijano to the Adult Probation and Parole Division for a pre-sentencing evaluation. For his guilty plea other charges will be dropped.

• Wesley Leon Robinson, 40, 187 W. 300 N., American Fork, pleaded not guilty to a charge of forcible sexual abuse. A trial setting date of June 7 was scheduled.

The Courts

• Jeffery L. Story, 37, pleaded not guilty to charges auto theft, driving under the influence of alcohol, driving while on suspension, and possession of stolen vehicle. Trial setting was scheduled for May 31.
